Nico the Nifty

by Sara Matson

- 1 Last summer, Sam had returned from camp with seven mosquito bites and three silk scarves.
- 2 "Watch this," he told his younger brother, Nico, one day.
- 3 Sam tossed the scarves into the air, one by one. As each fell, Sam grabbed it and tossed it up again in a slow-moving circle.
- 4 "Wow!" Nico said. "You learned to juggle."
- 5 "I still mess up a lot," Sam admitted as one of the scarves drifted to the floor.
- 6 Nico picked it up. "Remember that juggler who performed at the library?"

- 7 "He could juggle anything," Sam said, "even eggplants and cauliflower."
- 8 "I want to juggle too," Nico said. "Will you teach me?"
- 9 So after lunch, Sam taught Nico how to throw two scarves in an X shape—first the one in his right hand, then the one in his left.
- 10 "Adding the third one is tricky," Sam said.
- 11 "Like this?" Nico said. "Oops!"
- 12 Sam smiled. "It takes time to catch on."
- 13 But it didn't take Nico long at all. After supper, he marched into the family room wearing a magician's hat.
- 14 "Presenting Nico the Nifty!" he announced, then pulled Sam's scarves out of his sleeve. He began to juggle—slowly at first, then faster.
- 15 "Amazing!" Dad said.
- 16 "You're a natural," said Mom.
- 17 Sam was silent. How could Nico be the better juggler? Sam was older, and he'd been practicing longer. It wasn't fair.
- 18 It took three days for Nico to learn to juggle beanbags and three more for tennis balls.
- 19 At first, Sam worked as hard as Nico. But Sam's scarves and beanbags and balls kept drifting and falling and bouncing to the floor, while Nico's stayed in the air. Finally, Sam quit practicing. Juggling wasn't fun anymore.
- 20 A few weeks later, as Sam played basketball in the driveway, Nico hurried out of the house with his magician's hat.
- 21 "Guess what!" he said. "The community center is having a talent show in the park. I'm going to juggle water balloons. Isn't that a great idea?"
- 22 It was. But Sam didn't want Nico to know he thought so. "Better wear your swim trunks," he warned. "You'll get wet when you drop the balloons."
- 23 Nico put his hands on his hips. "I'm a good juggler."
- 24 "So what? Juggling is silly." Sam spun the basketball on his index finger, something Nico had never been able to do.

- 25 Nico scowled. "Yeah? Well, basketball is silly too!"
- 26 After Nico ran inside, Sam dribbled a few times and took aim. The ball swished through the hoop without touching the backboard. "Try to do that, little brother," he muttered.
- 27 On the morning of the talent show, Nico cut his waffle into pieces and built a tower with them. "What if I drop a balloon and everyone laughs?" he said.
- 28 "You'll do great," Mom said. "Won't he, Sam?"
- 29 "You are taking a towel, right?" Sam joked.
- 30 "Sam!" said Mom.
- 31 "Just kidding."
- 32 After breakfast, Sam shot hoops outside while Nico practiced one last time. Sam had just made a three-pointer when he heard a splat.
- 33 "Argh!"
- 34 Colorful balloon bits were scattered around Nico's feet. "Do you think it's too late to cancel?" Nico moaned.
- 35 Sam couldn't help feeling bad for his brother. "Probably."
- 36 "Even if I'm sick?" Nico said. "My stomach sort of hurts."
- 37 Sam remembered his basketball tournament last winter. Before the championship game, he'd felt so nervous that he almost wished he could catch a cold so he'd have a reason not to play. At the same time, he'd wanted to play to prove he could. Maybe Nico felt the same way.
- 38 "You know what?" Sam said. "It's good you broke some balloons. If you do it now, you probably won't do it onstage. That's what my coach always says. Make your mistakes in practice, not during the game."
- 39 Nico looked doubtful.
- 40 Sam tried again. "You've practiced a ton."
- 41 "I'll probably mess up," said Nico glumly.
- 42 Finally, Sam told Nico the truth. "Look, you're the best juggler I know. Before you know it, you'll be as good as the one we saw at the library."

- 43 "Really?" Nico said.
- 44 "Yeah," Sam said. "I'm sorry I was mean to you before. Come on. I'll help you fill more balloons before we leave."
- 45 Two hours later, Nico accepted his first-place trophy. He waved to Sam from the stage.
- 46 "Way to go!" Sam called. For once he was happy for Nico, not jealous. It felt good.
- 47 As they headed to the car, Sam had a thought. "We should ask Mom to stop at the store on the way home."
- 48 "Why?"
- 49 "Because I think it's time for Nico the Nifty to try juggling vegetables!"

Tiny Trees Would you like a pet tree?

by Kevin Kohler

- 1 Bonsai is a Japanese word that means "potted tree." But a bonsai is far more than a plant in a pot. Inspired by nature, bonsai artists create beautiful living sculptures from trees or shrubs.
- 2 Bonsai are not special small species of trees. They are regular full-sized trees, but grown in pots and trimmed to keep them small. While all bonsai are smaller than full-grown trees, they range greatly in size. Some you can hold in your hand, while others are so big they need a forklift to move.

3 The Chinese first trained trees in pots more than 1,300 years ago. They called their miniature trees penjing. They would often create elaborate landscapes or animal shapes with trees.

Some common bonsai shapes

- Bonsai Empire
- 4 A good bonsai tells a story. Different styles are meant to look like trees growing in harsh winds (windswept), on cliffs (cascade), or in other natural settings. Bonsai from flowering bushes can look like trees in spring.
- 5 Wires are wrapped around living branches to train them to grow into interesting shapes. The wires stay on for a few months, until the shape holds.

- 6 Bonsai artists use scissors, clamps, and other small tools to shape the branches. Dramatic dead branches can make a tree look older.
- Once a tree is shaped, it's moved into a pot. The bonsai artist carefully chooses a pot that will look just right with the finished tree. Large roots, which don't feed the tree, are removed. The pot is filled with special soil to keep the roots healthy.
- 8 In nature, some tree roots will tightly grip rocks. This is a popular style for bonsai. While a tree is still young, its roots are draped over a rock and wrapped with medical tape until the roots grip the rock on their own.
- 9 Most bonsai like to live outdoors. They are real, living trees and need plenty of sun and rain. Many also need a cold season to stay healthy. But bonsai grown from tropical trees need to come inside for the winter.
- 10 It can take many years to train a bonsai into just the right shape. Since they are living, growing plants, bonsai are never finished. They need daily care to stay healthy and keep looking their best. But if they're well-tended, they can live for hundreds of years. Anyone can grow bonsai. If you'd like to give it a try, check for a bonsai club near you or ask at your local arboretum.

Hobby Friday

by Beverly J. Letchworth

- 1 Chris looked at the clock again. Only five more minutes before school let out.
- 2 "On Friday," said his Creative Learning teacher, Mrs. Griswell, "be prepared to share your favorite hobby with the class. And please bring samples to show everyone!"
- 3 Chris groaned. No way am I going to talk about my favorite hobby, he thought.
- 4 After school, Chris's friend Nick plopped down beside him on the bus. "So what're you gonna do for that hobby thing?"
- 5 "Uh, I guess I can show my baseball cards," Chris mumbled. No one except his family knew about his real hobby.
- 6 "Cool," said Nick. "I'll bring in some of my hockey posters."
- 7 At home, Chris pulled out his boxes of baseball cards. He liked baseball—even played some. But his real hobby let him express things from his imagination, and that's what he liked most.
- 8 Sorting through his cards, Chris began choosing some of the best ones. He also thought about bringing in the ball that Albert Pujols had signed for him. And yet he didn't feel right about what he had decided.
- 9 Tuesday passed. Chris gathered his baseball supplies and put them in a grocery bag marked "My Favorite Hobby." He was ready for Friday, but something still felt wrong. He walked out of his room, ignoring the sketchpad on his desk.
- 10 Wednesday. After school Chris sat at the kitchen table with a cheese and ketchup sandwich and a glass of milk, but he wasn't hungry.

28

- 11 Chris sighed. He didn't want to be fake, but he wasn't sure he had the guts to tell everyone his real hobby.
- 12 He chewed his sandwich slowly, thinking of Grandma. She was the reason he'd gotten interested in his hobby in the first place. "You have talent," Grandma had told him proudly, admiring his work. And that felt really good.
- 13 Suddenly, Chris knew what he had to do. He dropped his sandwich on the plate and sprinted to the phone.
- 14 "Hi, Grandma, it's Chris. I need your help."
- 15 Friday morning. "Are you ready, Chris?" Mrs. Griswell asked. Everyone in the class turned to look at him.
- 16 Chris walked to the front of the classroom, clutching his grocery bag. His heart was pounding, and his legs felt shaky. I can't do this! he thought frantically.
- 17 "Go ahead and tell us about your hobby," Mrs. Griswell said, smiling.
- 18 Chris nodded. Get it over with, he told himself. Don't let them see you sweat. He remembered that from somewhere.
- 19 So he began. "I design things. I mean . . . I design clothes and accessories. I'm a fashion designer." He brought out his sketchbook and flipped through pages showing his designs for jackets and caps, pants and shirts.
 - 20 "My grandma designs clothes, too," he explained. "She taught me all about patterns and sewing." There were a few snickers, even though Mrs. Griswell was shaking her head.
 - 21 But when Chris pulled a headband from his bag and put it on, the class became quiet.
 - 22 "This is one of my accessories for boys. I braided black and blue cording and attached a small flat stone." He heard Nick say, "Cool!"
 - 23 "For girls, the cording is pink and purple with a small seashell."
 - 24 "I love it!" exclaimed Amber. A few of the other girls nodded enthusiastically.
 - 25 Chris felt a burst of hope. "I made headbands for everyone," he said.
 - 26 The whole class buzzed with excitement. Chris grinned. Now things finally felt right!

Paint the Morning

by Sandi Takayama

"Paint the Morning" by Sandi Takayama, illustrated by Bradley Clark, Spider, January 2011

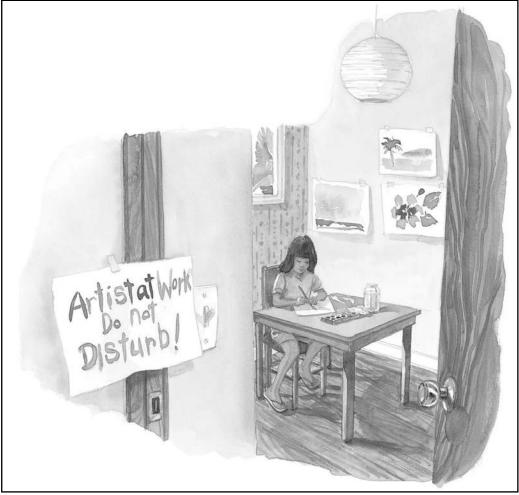

1 Malia slipped quietly out of bed and out of the house. She sat still and silent on the back lanai¹ as she watched the morning spread across the sky. She closed her eyes and felt the sunshine warming her body. She heard the wind whispering through her hair.

¹lanai: a Hawaiian word for a large, open porch that usually has a roof and is partially enclosed

- 2 Malia stood up slowly, holding the moment in her heart. Then she tiptoed excitedly back to her room. She wanted to paint the morning. To paint the colors of the sky, the warmth of the sun, and the sound of the wind.
- 3 She had barely begun when her brother burst into the room. "Breakfast, Malia. Hey . . . what're you doing?" He peered at her paper. "I didn't know you liked art. I just borrowed a cool book from the library. You can use it if you want." He rushed to his room and back, then handed her the book. "It shows you how to draw all kinds of cool monsters and vampires and stuff. Just give it back by Wednesday, 'cause I have to return it."
- 4 "Thanks!" said Malia. But she didn't want to draw monsters and vampires and stuff. When her brother left the room, she put the book down and picked up her paintbrush.
- 5 A few minutes later her father walked into the room. "Makaio just told me you're interested in art. There's a great show on this afternoon. They're painting barns and weather vanes."
- 6 "Thanks!" said Malia. But she didn't want to paint barns and weather vanes. When her father left the room, she picked up her paintbrush.
- 7 She closed her eyes to try to remember the morning and almost had it in her mind when her mother came into the room. "Malia, your breakfast is getting cold. You know, it's so wonderful to hear you're interested in art. There's a program at the rec center this summer. I'll sign you up. Here, it's in this brochure²."
- 8 Malia leafed through the brochure and saw "Art: Pottery—Pinch and Coil Pots."
- 9 "Thanks!" said Malia. But she didn't want to make pinch and coil pots. When her mother left the room, she put the brochure down and picked up her paintbrush. She was just about to start again when she heard more footsteps coming down the hall. Suddenly Malia knew there was something else she needed to paint. She worked quickly on the little sign and hung it outside her bedroom door.

Read the passages. You will then answer questions about the passages and write a response stating your opinion about video games.

Why Do Adults Think Video Games Are Bad?

by Joanne Orlando

- 1 Parents and children can have different ideas when it comes to video games.
- 2 Children like video games because they are fun and because they can be challenging. You have to solve problems, work out the best moves for your character, and decide how to use your equipment and supplies in the best possible way. Making all these decisions can be exciting.
- 3 Parents want to make sure that their children are safe and healthy. Because of this, they notice different things about video games.
- 4 Many worry that playing video games might have a bad effect on the way their child behaves. For example, if a video game has lots of fighting in it, they worry that playing it will encourage their child to be violent.
- 5 They are concerned that their child might always choose to play a video game instead of playing outside and getting exercise. Even though you sit still when you read a book, they know that kids can develop good reading skills and learn a lot. Many adults aren't so sure that kids can learn anything educational from video games.
- 6 Sometimes adults think that spending too much time with animated characters is unhealthy for kids. They know it's important for kids to spend time with "real" people and learn good social skills needed for the real world.

What Do Experts Say?

- 7 Experts think playing video games can have good and bad effects on kids. New research shows that there are lots of benefits.
- 8 One good thing is the video games that children play today often encourage them to work in teams, cooperate, and to help each other. This is because games today are often designed for multiple players, not like old-fashioned video games that were mostly designed for one player.

- 9 However, children who are obsessed with¹ video games and play them for a long time can get really competitive and can often try to win at all costs. Experts aren't sure yet, but they have real concerns that this might lead to kids acting like this in real life too.
- 10 One thing you also might like to know is that kids who regularly play video games often get higher grades in math, science, and reading tests. This is because games require players to solve puzzles. You won't get higher marks² playing any video games, just those that require the player to solve these kinds of puzzles.

Doing More of the Good and Less of the Bad

- 11 It's important for kids to think about what types of games they pick.
- 12 Make sure all of your games aren't fighting games. Instead, choose more games where you need to solve puzzles. These are fun and can also help with your schoolwork. Your parents will be much happier about that!
- 13 Also, think about whether the fighting games you play are affecting how you play with your friends in real life. Only you will really know if they are having a bad effect. If they are, you might want to change the games you play.
- 14 Why not ask your parents to play a problem-solving video game with you? This will help your parents see that video games are not all bad.
- 15 It's also important that kids and adults don't spend too much time using a screen. That means kids not spending all their time on technology, and parents not always checking their phone and screens.
- 16 What we want to aim for is adults and kids who can spend some of their time on their screens, but also enjoying other kinds of interests and spending time with family and friends.

Are Video Games Bad for Me?

Reviewed by: Mary L. Gavin, MD

- 1 Lots of kids love video games. In fact, they like them so much that they might hear something like this from Mom or Dad: "Enough! Unplug that thing and find something else to do!"
- 2 It can be good advice, even if you were just about to crash through to the next level. Why? Too much of anything is just too much. It's true that some studies have shown certain video games can improve hand-eye coordination, problem-solving skills, and the mind's ability to process information. But too much video-game playing may lead to health problems.
- 3 It's hard to get enough active play and exercise if you're always inside playing video games. And without enough exercise, kids can become unhealthy.
- 4 Really overdoing video games also could affect other important stuff, like friendships and how well a kid does in school. And kids who play violent video games might act more aggressively.
- 5 But here's the good news: Playing video games some of the time can be OK. Just choose quality games and limit screen time—which includes TV, computer, smartphone, tablet, and video game time combined—to no more than two hours a day.
- 6 A good game will be the right one for how old you are. Games are rated like movies, and your mom or dad can help figure out which ones you should use. If you can choose one that gets you up and moving, that's even better.
- 7 You might challenge your mom, dad—or even your grandma—to swing the bat in a game of baseball or try out some fancy moves in one of the dancing games. Could your grandma be a dancing queen? Time to find out!
